

"A Groom in a White Tuxedo Should Not Wear Striped Underwear"

I love the insanity of weddings and I wrote a book about my adventures. It's a behind-the-scenes view of things I have noticed for over 30 years. The title came from an actual experience, where a groom wearing a semi-transparent white tuxedo had striped underwear underneath which the guests could see. It was a very hilarious and embarrassing situation.

A Great Engagement or Shower Gift

Ultimate Dream: The bride's ultimate dream is the walk down the aisle. The groom's ultimate dream is to walk down the aisle of the buffet stations during the cocktail hour.

MEN DESIGNING A WEDDING

In general, weddings were never designed for men. If the average man were to plan a wedding, it would go something like this:

Location: Yankee Stadium, McDonald's, beach, fishing boat, bowling alley, golf course, Great Adventure, Disney World, Radio Shack, Hooters, Home Depot, Dicks Sporting Goods. Since marriage is a gamble anyway, consider Las Vegas or Atlantic City.

Photos: By a chimpanzee on roller blades with a disposable camera. The bridal party and family portraits would be done by stuffing them into a photo booth that creates a strip of 4 small photos for a dollar. Or get a Xerox paper copier then place each guests face on it and copy it.

Catering: A large barbecue pit in the middle of the dance floor, five hours of cocktails and a ten minute reception.

Cuisine: Barbeque, beer and White Castle Hamburgers

Officiant:: Native American Indian, peace pipe smoking priest

Ceremony: Bridal party going down the isle in bumper cars. Groom riding down the aisle on a white horse. Officiant bungy jumps from ceiling to altar. Sermon contains references to sports, motorcycles or the stock market.

Ceremony Length: 2 minutes, including procession, recession and receiving line.

Décor: 5 Large HD TVs with sports events, 60 arcade games, pony rides, Ferris wheel, Bull Riding, Rock climbing, water slides, kayak and canoe rides and petting zoo Animals, and a Confessional booth.

Centerpieces: 1 daphodil in a Coor's beer bottle. An over the top center piece would include remote controls, shoelaces, basketball, hockey stick, bowling ball, old sneakers & a hub cap.

Restroom: Basketball hoop in the men's room to toss the paper towels into the wastebasket.

Bride's outfit: Red high heels, garter belt and a Madonna or Cher outfit.

Groom's Outfit: Bermuda shorts, sneakers, tee shirt or bare chest, Harley Cowboy hat, Bowtie with flashing LED lights.

Limos: 10 foot wheeled Monster truck with 12 foot bar, led by a 60 Harley Davidson Motorcycle Motorcade and followed by a 400 piece marching band with Super Bowl Half Time Entertainment

Budget Allocation Left over change from a guy's night out.

Music: A 1 man band with an accordion and an organ grinder with a monkey holding a tin cup, for wedding contributions.

Things men can not comprehend: 1. Women

2. Why pay so much money for a wedding dress that you will only wear once?

3. Why pay so much money for flowers that are going to die anyway, when it could be more wisely invested in beer!

4. Why pay so much money for a whole wedding album when 1 snap shot will do?

5. Why pay so much money for china that is used once a year, when patterned paper plates will do?
